

He contaminated our groundwater.
He stole Pension Funds.

He thought he could get away with it...

...And then he met Mark Lesko

“A titanium maker and its owner were charged with illegally storing more than 11 tons of corrosive hazardous waste... Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Lesko said the site “literally looked like a science fiction horror movie.”

-Associated Press, September 9, 2006

“One of the nation’s worst polluters.”

- Newsday September 18, 2006

“...Charging them with a host of violations of state environmental law. Among other accusations, the state says that the generators were installed and run without necessary permits and in violation of orders from the department, and that they continued operations at this plant in defiance of a court order.”

-NY Times January 15, 2006

He stole his employees pensions.
He poured toxic waste into our groundwater.
He thought he was above the law.

HE WAS WRONG.

Gerald Cohen, owner of Lawrence Aviation in Port Jefferson Station, committed one of the worst environmental crimes in Brookhaven's history, letting tons of toxic waste seep into our groundwater. Then with the swipe of a pen, he stole over $1 million from his employees' pension fund.

Federal prosecutor Mark Lesko made sure he wouldn't get away with it. Mark personally handled the case. After a hard fought case, Mark won. Today the property is being cleaned up, and Gerald Cohen was forced to return $1.3 million in stolen pension funds to his workers.

As a prosecutor, Mark represented the PEOPLE.
As Brookhaven Supervisor, Mark will do the same.
